Batoche National Historic Site

In 1885, Gabriel Dumont, Louis Riel and the Métis took on the Federal Government in a battle that changed the development of Western Canada. Trenches, rifle pits and the troop's camp tell the story of that battle. Bullet holes in the rectory and the graves of Dumont and others testify to the struggle for land and identity.

- Guides in period costume
- Visitor Centre with a video show and exhibit hall
- Trails to historical points of interest
